

Molly Jerrard - Biography

Molly Jerrard is Head of Flexibility for Enel North America, overseeing Enel's demand response business line in the US and Canada. Enel is the largest demand response provider in the world.

Molly has over 13 years of experience in demand response, coming to Enel through an acquisition of Boston based demand response leader, EnerNOC in 2017. She has a passion for carbon-free energy and sees demand response as a captivating area of focus – it is the intersection of customers, markets, regulators, utilities, and data. She truly believes that if we as Enel can lead the energy transition and be successful, our net-zero climate goals as a society are within reach.

Molly has had various positions at Enel primarily on the Energy Markets team in portfolio management and new product launch. She has been part of the Enel leadership team since 2022 and helped our demand response offering evolve into not just “emergency demand response” but to include advanced flexibility solutions such as ancillary services participation, asset management services, and VPP integrations. The Enel demand response business now offers over 4.7 GW of capacity in North America.

She is a Cornell University graduate with a Bachelor of Arts in Government. In her spare time, she enjoys being outside in nature as much as possible, yoga, and connecting near and far with friends and family.